Stay away from online study sites unless you are familiar with your content. These sites can lead to confusion and conflict with institutional policy. Some kinds of participation in online study sites violate the Mason Honor code: these include accessing exam or quiz questions for this class; accessing exam, quiz, or assignment answers for this class; uploading some of any of the instructor's materials or exams; and uploading any of your own answers or finished work. Always consult your syllabus and your professor before using these sites.

Confirmed cases of cheating almost always translate into course failure. We take the honor code quite seriously. Any attempts at copying or sharing code, algorithms, or other violations of the honor code simply will not be tolerated. We use automated software to flag suspicious cases, and then review them to find the cases that must be submitted to the Office of Academic Integrity. The penalty for cheating will always be far worse than a zero grade, to ensure it's not worth taking the chance.

Unless specific instructions are given to the contrary, projects are an individual effort, no group work is allowed. In addition to code, this includes the sharing of test cases, pseudocode, or approaches, receiving help from classmates, and copying any code for this class. Code which does not compile or pass initial validation checks will receive a zero in most cases.

Late submission is allowed for projects and exercises only, and only up to 48 hours. For projects and exercises, any number of re-submissions are allowed (the most recent is used), however a re-submission turned in after the deadline will be considered a late submission.

By department policy, students must pass the final exam with a passing grade (60%) to pass the course. The final exam is comprehensive. Its purpose is to assess students' understanding of the course material. The exam is open book and open notes.

Note: The final exam has been rescheduled to a new time. The rescheduled exam is now on Tuesday, May 9, 2024, during the regularly scheduled exam week.

Students must be in person at the exam, and the exam must be completed in one sitting. No personal devices or sources of aid are allowed during the exam. Exams are monitored externally by proctoring companies, and then students are blind graded by trained graders. The Office of Academic Integrity must be made aware of any cases of cheating.
